

WHISKEY LIST

The list that follows is a love letter to American whiskey. Now it isn't nice to brag, but it's a long walk from our front door to the nearest collection like this, so you should probably have one for the road. But which one? Our second favorite thing to do with whiskey is share it, so whether you're after a trusted favorite, something new and daring, or a pour that is rare and sublime, we can help. About that last type of pour—the kind that's so good it turns fine upstanding folks into whiskey-crazed fanatics like us (if you've ever crossed state lines just for a bottle, you know what we mean). This list often includes bottles we may never see again, and many we don't see as often as we'd like. So if we've recently polished off the one you've been hunting for, we feel your pain, and we've got something for it. (It's whiskey.)

Bourbon & Rye

Bourbon whiskey must be produced in the U.S. and distilled from mash containing at least 51% corn then aged in new charred American oak barrels. To be designated "straight" it must age for a minimum of 2 years and contain no additives or coloring. We offer only straight whiskey.

Rye Whiskey can be called the first true American whiskey; distilled from 51% or more rye mash, though other grains can be added and aged in new charred American oak barrels for a minimum of 2 years

Scotch Whisky

Must be pot distilled from 100% sprouted barley malt and aged in Scotland for a minimum of 3 years in oak casks, mostly spent bourbon barrels. Only malts blended from the same distillery can be used. Any age statement reflects the youngest whisky in a blend. A blend from 2 or more distilleries, it must still be produced and aged in Scotland for 3 years. Other grain whisky can also be added in order to create a consistent style.

Rum/Rhum/Cachaca

Rum is made from the distillation of fermented molasses, a byproduct from sugar cane after refining and aged in oak barrels. Rhum is made of fermented fresh pressed cane juice; highly regarded for its aromatic characteristics. Cachaca is a Brazilian style of rum that predates other rum production by almost 100 years. It is made from the first pressing of sugar cane that is fermented and distilled.
